

BRAYDON ZINK

Musician Braydon Zink and his band have been appearing at the Empty Bowls Project for several years and their performance is always highly anticipated. Braydon's music is what Texans would consider down home "real country", combining red dirt, outlaw, and a touch of southern rock influences.

Originally from the small town of Illiff, Colorado, Braydon was introduced to the organ by his grandmother when he was ten years old. He quickly learned to play traditional gospel songs and then learned how to read music when he picked up the trumpet. Braydon saved his allowance, bought his first guitar, and taught himself how to play when he was only eleven. Listening to recordings of Johnny Cash and Elvis Presley greatly influenced his preference for country music. When he was unable to pursue collegiate sports, Braydon started writing his own songs and soon began performing throughout northeastern Colorado.

With a solid following in Colorado, Braydon set his sights on Austin and for the last three years he has called Texas home. He has had the opportunity to perform in front of very appreciative audiences across the state, as well as other venues throughout the Southwest.

A radio host in Colorado once said, "Few artists can tap so deeply into the soul of true classic country as Braydon Zink." Braydon's music will make you want to two-step across a sawdust dance floor and his authentic and original lyrics will tug at your heart and touch your soul.

Braydon and his band have become members of The Empty Bowls family and we are so grateful they have brought their music to our events. Until we meet again in 2021, many, many thanks!
