

DIRT DIVA POTTERY

BY: MINDY CROWE

Mindy Crowe has been one of our Empty Bowls Project participants for the past five years. Mindy's fabulous pottery is inspired by nature as well as her own creativity. Not only does she make functional items that she would personally like to own, but she also creates items that are just fun to make.

Mindy enjoys being a potter and it gives her an opportunity to use her own original and unique ideas. Mindy loves to see her pieces come out of the kiln because it's like a box of chocolates!

After creating and executing an idea, Mindy sometimes finds herself attached to her favorite pieces. This is one reason she particularly likes to meet shoppers at the shows she attends. It's always fun to meet the person who is buying a particular piece of pottery. It makes Mindy happy to know who is going home with it.

We are so pleased that Mindy has been part of the Empty Bowls Project. She always brings energy to our event and we are looking forward to seeing her again in 2021!

Mindy and her pottery can usually be found at various shows around the Austin area but COVID-19 has forced cancellations for the rest of the year. Some of Mindy's pottery is on display at her studio, Fireseed Clay, on Thornton Road in Austin.
